

Pediatric Psychologist Position Openings Yale Child Study Center

The Yale Child Study Center has openings for full-time pediatric psychologists dedicated to providing integrated mental health supports and services to children, teens, and families. Successful candidates will be appointed as Assistant Professor on the clinician ladder track and will provide brief assessment, intervention, and referral to services as part of an integrated behavioral health team. Our integrated behavioral health team works collaboratively with pediatric sub-specialists, nurses, social workers, and allied professionals. Opportunities for program development and developing a line of relevant research may be available.

Our pediatric psychologists are integral members of the Child Study Center's Outpatient Clinic; specific clinical services include psychological assessments, psychotherapy with patients and their families, clinical consultation with interdisciplinary team members, and facilitation of transitions in care to other sections within the Yale Child Study Center or to community-based services.

Successful candidates must possess a doctoral degree in psychology with training in pediatric psychology and be licensed or license-eligible in Connecticut. Training and experience in collaborative, integrated behavioral health models of service delivery in specialty medical clinics are highly preferred. We welcome applicants with interests in program development, quality improvement, and training practicum students, psychology interns, and/or postdoctoral fellows.
